

WEB DESIGNER OPPORTUNITY AT ANOBII

Anobii are hiring a web designer to join us in our London office.

We are an exciting new UK digital venture in the fast-evolving ebook sector. Our proposition is best summarised as 'social retailing', harnessing the power of social networking within a large, passionate and growing community to help solve the problem of 'what do I read next?', combined with an innovative approach to e-commerce.

Anobii is undertaking a major upgrade of its services and is relaunching in beta in the UK. We need a web designer to help us build beautiful and engaging products for web, mobile and tablets.

You will be part of the product development team, working with product manager, UX designers and software developers. You will also work with our marketing manager to produce campaign materials.

You will see your designs through from early sketches to the live product. You will be making decisions about visual identity, icon design, colour schemes, branding and typography and you'll maintain an Anobii style guide for the rest of the team to refer to. You'll be aware of the possibilities and limitations of common web development methodologies and will design with these in mind. You won't be producing 'pixel-perfect' designs on paper; you will be producing interaction designs which we will use to build desirable, usable and feasible products.

Skills and Experience

- Creativity and attention to detail
- Expertise in Photoshop, Illustrator or other relevant design tools
- Ideally you will have HTML/CSS/JS experience
- Experience and interest in UX is highly desirable
- Ability to think holistically and insightfully about the full user experience
- Ability to articulate, justify and validate your design decisions and recommendations
- An interest in books is essential!
